

The Hunk and darling

Page Six™

By FRANK DIGIACOMO and JOANNA MOLLOY
With Florence Anthony

Baby suit

MARIE Osmond and producer Brian Blossil filed an $18 million lawsuit for libel in L.A. Monday against the Globe for an article it ran on their adopted son Michael last year. The squeaky-clean singer and her husband claim the supermarket tabloid's piece "Secret Baby" falsely implied that the infant was the result of an adulterous liaison of Blossil's. It also featured the heading "Frantic Marie Osmond covers up new son's adoption to ward off extortion by real mom," which the couple claims is untrue. The Globe's lawyer said the tab had not yet been served with papers.

Paddy's lads

THOUGH some people say Black 47 is the next U2, the band has pledged not to forget its roots. Discovered by Ric Ocasek, the band signed a three-album contract last night with EMI for a high six figures. But Black 47, led by Irishman Larry Kirwan and numbering at least one New York City cop among its members, has pledged to keep playing at Paddy Reilly's pub on Second Ave. "That's where it started," says a spokesman, "and that's where their fans are."

DARYL Hannah and John F. Kennedy can't get enough of each other.

After trying to live separate lives on separate coasts with separate love interests, the actress has moved to Manhattan and wasted no time reacquainting herself with the assistant district attorney.

From what we hear, it would have taken more than a bucket of cold water to separate the godawfully good-looking couple when Hannah and the Hunk visited Raoul's Brasserie on Varick Street Thursday night and made a case for love, or at least lust.

JFK Jr., in green fatigue pants and a black T-shirt, and blonde Daryl in T-shirt, jeans and a floppy hat — hugged, kissed and danced up a spicy storm of speculation to the strains of a zydeco band called Loup Garou.

"They were smacking it up," remembers one eyewitness, who said the two were with another couple and stayed from 11:30 p.m. to 1:30 a.m. "It was real lovey-dovey."

Our savvy source says that, at first, Hannah — who's taking filmmaking classes at New York University — seemed to be trying to keep a low profile. But about five rounds of Amstel Light apparently helped quell her inhibitions.

Though each of the two has been linked to other romantic playmates, Daryl and John-John apparently have had a hard time staying apart since we reported an argument between them on Central Park West shortly before Valentine's Day.

At the time, insiders said the actress was giving Kennedy the equivalent of a Dear John-John letter, explaining that she was trying to make a go of her relationship with anti-nuke folkie-turned-Amnesty International spokesperson Jackson Browne.

The source says wedding bells might have rung for Jackson and Daryl had the principled pop star not confessed to her that he'd picked up a woman one-night

"It really she was u seeing JF

Indeed, had share line Onas Vineyard

Kenned cluded M Jessica J cently w Julie Bak to Jackie

At the Daryl h said, she ate from

This tim commen

Pen and ink

CHICAGO socialite/novelist Sugar Rautbord understandably has a special place in her heart for Illinois residents. So when two guys approached her at a book signing in Boca Raton, Fla. and asked her to inscribe a book for a good fellow currently residing in Marion, Ill., she took the request to heart. To whom, Sugar asked, should she address her remarks? "John," came the reply. "John Gotti," who's serving his life sentence at the federal pen they should have known," Sugar told us, "because they also had a copy of 'The Firm.'" John Grisham's book about a law firm with mob ties. Rautbord signed. Surviving the best revenge now." After she told us, "What does one say

Eddie not star of Going to Africa

BESS: what a drag!

BESS Myerson and Andy Cap...