O'Malley's March to open for Irish rock band in Baltimore on Saturday

June 02, 2014 | By Michael Dresser

Gov. Martin O'Malley's band will open for one of the nation's best-known and most political Celtic rock bands Saturday in Baltimore, the governor's political action committee has announced.

O'Malley's March will play at what is billed as the last Baltimore concert of Black 47 as the New York-based band conducts its final tour after 25 years as one of the most influential bands of its kind.

The doors will open at 6:30 p.m. at the Baltimore Soundstage at Market Place. Tickets are $20 in advance or $25 at the door, but a two-person package is also available for $71.50 that includes preferred seating and a credit toward a food purchase.

Black 47, named after the worst year of the great Irish famine of the 19th Century, is a band with strong Irish Republican leanings that also took a strong stance against the Iraq war. Last year, the band announced it would disband in November -- a quarter-century after its last concert -- in order to go out while at the top of its game.
