Port Chester to Raise One Last Pint to Black 47

📅 July 28, 2014 By Steve Malinski Leave a Comment

New York City's own Irish-American rockers Black 47 may be winding down their career at the end of this year, but before they do so they'll be hitting Garcia's at The Capitol Theatre in Port Chester, N.Y. this Thursday.

Black 47 has had an incredible 25-year career and to cap things off they have recently released their final album, Last Call, this past March. Aside from their latest, they have 16 full-length albums, including a few live recordings.

While Black 47 will be making two more stops in the Hudson Valley (Kingston and Peekskill) before the end of September, a packed house at Garcia's will prove to be one heck of a party.

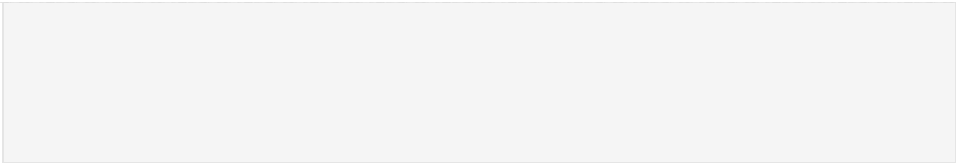

Doors open at 6 p.m. and the show starts at 9 p.m.

Tickets are $20 and available at the Capitol Theatre's website here.

The event is open to 21-years and older, allowing all to raise their pints in the air!

Here's a track off of Last Call: "The Night the Showbands Died"

Steve Malinski

Steve is an engineer by day formerly from the Capitol District, now from the lower Hudson Valley. He has a Bachelor of Science from Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute and a Master of Engineering from Cornell University in Civil Engineering. Aside from analyzing and solving technical problems over several cups of coffee, Steve has a profound interest in music. He has been an active DJ since 2004 and (more recently) the local music director on WRPI in Troy and hosts a weekly Grateful Dead program on WVBR-FM in Ithaca.
